"We enjoy our clients, we love their pets, and we welcome them as part of our Sunny Brae Animal Clinic family," explains Jocelyn Figas, office manager of Sunny Brae Animal Clinic.

Sunny Brae Animal Clinic has been providing the people of Humboldt County with the latest in pet care since they opened in 1972, with current owner and veterinarian, Dr. Jay Hight who joined the practice in 1978. Sunny Brae Animal Clinic has nine doctors on staff; Dr. Susan Burden, Dr. Tami Reynolds, Dr. Lea Schroeder, Dr. Malcolm Richardson, Dr. Leigh Higgins, Dr. Rachel Carlton, Dr. Marlena Folden, and Dr. Alicia Garlick provide the best care possible to all of your small animals. Sunny Brae Animal Clinic also offers discounted vaccines seven days a week.

Sunny Brae Animal Clinic is also very involved in the local community. "We participate in our round up program for local non-profits every other month, and have our Giving Tree during Christmas time. We are also very involved with the local shelters, and all of our counties' K-9 police units," Jocelyn explains.

When the staff at Sunny Brae Animal are not providing the animals of Humboldt County with exceptional care, they visit nearby Sunny Brae Murphy's to refill. "The staff loves the Deli," says Jocelyn. From a quick grab and go lunch to one of their excellent sandwiches, the Murphy's Deli has everything one would need for a complete and affordable meal.

With staff that has been around for 30 years, Sunny Brae Animal Clinic is the same small town vet, only now with extended hours to better serve the community. Sunny Brae Animal Clinic is open from 7am – 10pm seven days a week, with after hours on call emergency service every night by calling 707-822-5124. ## Not Blue about the Blue Heron

Editor:

The other day while driving down Broadway I observed a drunken/drugged, bare-chested man pin wheeling onto Broadway without looking either way for traffic, causing multiple cars to slow down in order for him to cross the street. I thought to myself how this scene would look to anyone wanting to start a business or maybe a young doctor and family thinking about opening a practice in our beautiful part of the world. A half minute later I was in front of the Blue Heron Lodge with the usual handful of patrons outside doing whatever they do, which wasn't working in the traditional sense. I then noticed police were there and plywood was being put up in the front of the hotel ("Blog Jammin'," Feb. 12). "Finally!" I thought to myself.

Congrats to Police Chief Mills, the Eureka police, the Eureka City Council, Brian Gerv-ing, Greg Sparks and anyone else involved in the shutdown of what was one of the first impressions you get of Eureka entering from the south. The filth in these rooms is disgusting and the owners, the Squirese, should be made to pay for any expense incurred by the city for having to maintain their property, the lodging permits that they failed to obtain, court costs, code violations, rents incurred by their guests and anything else that the city can fine them for. I believe the majority of the Blue Heron residents are getting some kind of aid and I'll bet the Squirese were right behind the checks collecting their rent. The Squirese ripped off their residents and through them, us. For years that hotel/motel was a blight on the city both visually and economically. The Blue Heron, with less than 1 percent of the city's hotel/motel rooms, generated 11 percent of the emergency calls to the city.

Again, thanks to all involved and to the Blue Heron, I say good riddance!

Worthless?!

Editor:

When Proposition 19 (legalization of cannabis for recreational use) was the hot local issue and there was much talk of making Humboldt County the Napa Valley of cannabis, I proposed to the Humboldt Medical Marijuana Advisory Panel and the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors to make Humboldt County the Silicon Valley of cannabis.

My reasoning was this: Cannabis contains more than 80 chemicals called cannabinoids, such as THC and CBD, that have a large potential for medical use. We know very little about many of these compounds because it is illegal or very difficult to research them. There is even a U.S. patent on cannabis listing cannabinoids and their medical uses. The synthetic THC drug Marinol has already been approved by the FDA over 30 years ago and yet cannabis remains Schedule I (no medical use and highly addictive).

Robert Sharpe's letter to the NCJ on Feb. 12, "Virtually Worthless," makes me want to say this: If Marinol was made with naturally grown cannabis with a THC concentration of about 20 percent it would have a retail value of about $90,000 a pound. A second drug, Sativex, is made from naturally grown THC and CBD. It costs at least twice as much as Marinol. When cannabis is eventually taken off Schedule I there will be a huge amount of research on cannabinoids and their medical uses. In the same way that growers have been able to increase the strength of THC and CBD in cannabis they will be able to increase the strength of other cannabinoids. This will potentially create a booming industry here in Humboldt County, supplying cannabinoids to research facilities in the U.S. and around the world.

Find Your Tribe

Editor:

What I've really been trying to say with my barrage of angry letters ("Mailbox," Jan. 15, Feb. 5) is that the North Coast Journal has a very bad habit of preaching to the choir and patting themselves on the back for reporting ground-breaking news. Everyone in this county knows that growers are scandalous, from their environmental violations to the way they treat women.

Linda Stansberry did make an excellent point in her "Is Rape the Third Rail of Discourse" article (Jan. 29) when she stated that there are way too many unheard stories out there. If this is true, then why is the NCJ reporting the same old stuff and calling it news? You know who never gets any press? Old school working folks that live in closed communities. These closed communities used to be called tribes, and every human on the earth used to belong to one the way nature intended. As a closed community, they tend to favor frontier justice over state involvement. If a grower rapes a girl or pollutes a stream, where is the grow community to stop him? Oh, that's right. They're so afraid of the state coming in and destroying everyone's livelihood that they look the other way. Why does the state need to regulate

Danger at McCann

A kayaker's death has raised safety questions about low-water bridges

By Heidi Walters

Last month, 24-year-old Samantha Dweck was boating on the Eel River with a group from San Francisco when a strong current under the McCann Bridge sucked her kayak into a bridge piling. The kayak capsized, and the current pinned it underwater against the support. Dweck's companion in the kayak freed himself, but she was unable to and drowned.

Two days later, local fish biologist Joshua Strange wrote in dismay to the county's director of public works, Tom Mattson, saying Dweck's drowning was unnecessary. Strange said he'd boated the main stem of the Eel in 2014 and found the bridge at McCann and another at Holmes — both owned by the county — to be “the worst man-made hazards to navigation” he'd seen in his 20 years of whitewater boating. He called the McCann Bridge, in particular, “a death trap” and both bridges “clear-cut violations of the Public Trust Doctrine of California ... which protects the public's right to boat in a variety of craft on navigable waterways free of man-made obstructions and hazards.” They shouldn't even be there, in this day and age, he said.

Both bridges are what are called low-water crossings — usable when the water is low, and unusable when high water flows over them. Residents of Larabee, on the east side of the river, use the Holmes-Larabee Bridge to get to Holmes and U.S. Highway 101 on the west side during the summer when the road into the community is closed for logging use. The nine McCann residents (there are more in the summer), also on the east side of the river, have no other access road and use the McCann Bridge whenever the river is low enough to connect to Dyerville Loop Road and, eventually, the highway. When the river flows over the McCann Bridge, residents use the county-run ferry. (See “Other Side of the River,” March 24, 2011). Some days, when the river is too rough, the ferry doesn't cross and the residents stay put.

Strange wrote that while he sympathized with the residents' need for access, he thought the bridges should be removed first and immediately, and then alternative crossings figured out.

The Holmes-Larabee low-water crossing is, in fact, being replaced. The 78-year-old structure was closed in 2013 because it had deteriorated, and the county has since provided a temporary bridge. Mattson said the county has secured the assurance of $18 million in federal highway funds to build a permanent bridge that will be high enough to be operable year-round. He said that the defunct low-water bridge, which is so low it cannot be boated under, “most likely” would be removed, but that would “depend on studies that have to be made.”

It would cost about the same to replace the McCann Bridge, Mattson said, but the county has no plans to do so. That's because the bridge doesn't qualify for replacement funding, he said. To qualify, a bridge has to have a “sufficiency rating” below 50, and the McCann's rating is 60. In answer to Strange's claim that the McCann Bridge violates California's Public Trust Doctrine, Mattson said that the bridge “is fully permitted in accordance with local, state and federal requirements.”

The crossing at McCann has seen numerous configurations: boats, a gondola, bridges — even a couple of high-water bridges further upstream where the canyon is narrower. The present low-water bridge, built in 1964, begins on the west side and ends abruptly about two-thirds of the way across the riverbed. It was 60 percent finished when the 1964 flood swept through and rearranged things, said southern Humboldt County roads superintendent Bill White in an interview with the Journal several years ago. (Attempts to reach him for this story were unsuccessful.) Since 1964, when the water's low enough, the county just pushes gravel into a ramp each year at the dangling end. There've been battles, as well, over what sort of crossing to have. At one point, the county proposed dropping the ferry service and extending the bridge at least a couple hundred feet. Some residents sued, wanting to keep the ferry. Other residents wanted the bridge extended. And some critics thought that even an extended bridge might still get overtopped during high water. (The county did spruce up some of the ferry works a few years ago, adding gravel to one of the launch sites and buying a new boat — but the launch site isn't wheelchair accessible, said McCann resident Tracy Whitlow, and the county still hasn't built a shelter for passengers to wait in during inclement weather.)

The best option would be a high-water bridge, White said, adding, “That's No. 1 on my list of things to do before I retire: to get a bridge built and get us out of the boat business. It's dangerous. You can't take the river too lightly, even in calm water situations.”

But at least the ferry runs downstream of the bridge. And residents are aware of the dangers; visitors, not always. Whitlow said her husband, Rex, has rescued a few people whose boats have gotten hung up on the bridge pilings.

“We had a church group go through three years ago, and they wrapped a kayak around that bridge,” she said. “It's really treacherous. I wouldn't take a boat under it — although, there's a lot of fishermen who do go under the bridge. But they're experienced.”

She said the kayaking groups who return each year, traveling from upstream, usually exit the river above the bridge and portage around it. The group that Dweck was with decided to float under the bridge. When the Whitlows heard on the scanner there was trouble at the bridge, Rex went to check it out and spent hours at the scene trying to help, although Dweck had drowned before he got there.

Strange, the biologist and whitewater veteran, said boaters unfamiliar with the river there might not realize the hazard until it's too late. The river bends just before the bridge comes into sight, he said, which gives a boater little time to assess the situation.

“It's swift, it's on a short turn, and you have to make a decision quickly,” he said. “And then it looks like you can just shoot through the gaps between the pilings. But the problem is they're set at a 45-degree angle to the current, so if you attempt to shoot the gap the direction of the current is going to throw you up on the pilings.”

At least the Holmes-Larabee Bridge, he said, is on a straight stretch of river so a boater has time to figure out that the bridge is too low to go under and must be traversed around. “Whereas the McCann bridge is a death trap. It lures you into thinking you can go through it.”

David Steindorf, with American Whitewater, a national river conservation organization, agrees with Strange that the bridge is dangerous. “Our understanding is there's no signage, no warnings,” he said. “I have been discussing it with our legal counsel on staff, and reaching out to other people. We plan on writing a letter to the county saying it should do something about this.”

Mattson, meanwhile, said the county “is investigating to see if there are improvements that can be made” to the McCann Bridge to make it less hazardous. ●

Lincoln's Hearse

Story by Heidi Walters

Photos by Alexander Woodard

A couple of Thursdays ago at Blue Ox Millworks, some of the cats were sacked out in the sunshine and others inside the office by crackling wood stoves. Bluto, the golden-eyed, bear-faced dog, flopped like a giant, piled-up rug on some unevenly stacked timbers in the yard. Birds were talking. The air was still.

At the blacksmith shop, someone hammered on metal, tink-tink-tink-tink. In the yard, a blue beast of a tractor, three-quarters of a century old, rumbled to life. And inside the cavernous main workshop, Blue Ox master craftsman Eric Hollenbeck and master woodworkers Enrique Ayala and Cesar Murillo conferred over a partly finished, ornate hearse — a replica of the original that carried President Abraham Lincoln's body on the final day of the funeral procession's two-week, 1,654-mile train journey in April and May of 1865. (1)

Different hearses carried Lincoln's body in the cities visited by the funeral procession. His final hearse, of which there is only one known existing photo, was drawn by six black horses and carried him to Oak Ridge Cemetery. It was built in Philadelphia in 1857 for St. Louis livery operators Lynch & Arnot, for $6,000 — nearly $200,000 today. Before Lincoln, it had carried the bodies of Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, the first general to die in the Civil War; and both a Missouri governor and senator. A decorative middle panel was made for Lincoln that included 36 stars, one for each state of the Union, upside-down torches and a silver medallion with the president's initials, "in memoriam" and "May 1, 1865" engraved on it. The hearse burned up in a livery stable fire in 1887 that also killed three men and 200 horses. (2)

Hollenbeck designed the hearse using the historic photo, an old newspaper account and the dimension of the back wheels from an 1865 bill of lading. The photo was shot at an angle, which Hollenbeck had to correct for in order to scale the rest of the parts. (3)

The main frame is maple, like the original, except for the redwood window frames. The decorative pillars were made with carved wood molds cast in melted-down aluminum scrap, then gold- and silver-leafed by Allpoints Signs and embedded with black cabochons that Blue Ox's lapidarist cut from Brazilian onyx. (4)

Cody Drury, one of a dozen combat veterans who helped build the hearse at Blue Ox over the past nine months as part of a new veteran's program, says the work has restored his sense of purpose. "My job was to kill and destroy," he says. "At this place, I get to use the diligence I learned in the Army to create." (5)

The hearse is now in Arizona, where Tombstone Hearse and Trike Co.'s Jack Feather, a Vietnam veteran, will paint it and attach the chassis, wheels and axles built by another Vietnam veteran, Jay Jones, in Kentucky. On May 1-3, the hearse will star in the 150th anniversary commemoration of Lincoln's funeral, in Springfield, Illinois. ●

Trying Sanity

The man accused of torturing and murdering St. Bernard's Pastor Eric Freed on New Year's Day 2014 has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, but statistics indicate that will likely have little impact on his ultimate fate.

If Gary Lee Bullock's case proceeds to trial, there will be two phases: a typical trial, with a jury deciding whether he's guilty, and then, if the jury decides he is, a sanity phase, during which the jury would decide if he was legally insane at the time. If the jury decides he was sane, Bullock would serve a prison sentence the same as any other convict. But if the jury decides Bullock was legally insane, he would be committed indefinitely to a state mental institution.

Insanity pleas are incredibly rare. In California, to find a defendant not guilty by reason of insanity, a jury must decide the evidence shows the defendant both didn't understand the "nature and quality of his act" and wasn't able to distinguish between right and wrong.

Michael Perrotti, a psychiatrist based in Yorba Linda who has served as an expert witness on the subject of sanity, said judging whether someone was legally insane at some past moment in time is difficult.

To make such a determination, Perrotti collects "data" through a test designed to weed out folks faking an insane state, and reviews evidence in the case, the defendant's mental health, medical and neurological histories. He pays special attention to whether the defendant did anything that displays a conscious awareness of guilt, things like destroying evidence or otherwise trying to cover up the crime. Statements from witnesses and officers who interacted with or observed the defendant around the time of the alleged crime can also be very telling. And, when possible, Perrotti likes to talk to jail staff and others who have observed the defendant's behavior in the aftermath of the alleged offense.

In the case of Bullock — who hours after his release from jail is alleged to have broken into Freed's rectory, tortured and killed the priest before taking his car and returning to Southern Humboldt — it seems a psychiatrist would have a lot of "data" to work with to form an opinion. Bullock had a host of contacts with law enforcement and neighbors before his arrest, was evaluated at a local hospital before being booked into the jail due to erratic behavior, and was reportedly contacted by a St. Bernard's security guard and a Eureka police officer before allegedly trying to break into the rectory.

And, according to court documents, police believe he wrapped Freed's body in blankets, doused it with liquor and tried to light it on fire. Then, according to the documents, Bullock placed a lit cigar on the stove and turned on all the burners, flooding the rectory with gas.

EMERGENCY / OUTDOORS

Eureka Drowns

The Humboldt County Coroner's Office identified the man who drowned in Redwood Creek after a rafting accident on Feb. 13 as 33-year-old Jonathan Walsh Mellon, of Eureka.

"We're viewing this as an unfortunate accident," said sheriff's Sgt. Ernie Stewart, adding he doesn't anticipate any criminal investigation stemming from Mellon's death.

According to the sheriff's office, Mellon and two other men were on a three-day rafting trip when they reached Redwood Falls, about 12 miles upriver from Orick. There, Mellon and one of his companions got out of the boat to set up safety lines to help the third rafter navigate the falls. The boat made it safely down the falls, but Mellon got snared in one of the lines and pulled into the water. Mellon's companions found him 15 to 20 minutes later but he'd already drowned.

Mellon's two companions loaded his body on the raft and transported it to Orick, where they called police.

COMMUNITY / GOVERNMENT

Squires Tenants File Claims

Seven former tenants of Floyd and Betty Squire's Blue Heron Lodge have filed nearly identical claims for damages against Eureka, arguing the city unlawfully evicted them, violated their civil rights and intentionally inflicted emotional distress upon them when the city condemned the lodge earlier this month (see "Blog Jammin'," Feb. 12 and Jan. 29). Each of the claims seeks unspecified damages in excess of $25,000.

The claims were all filed on Feb. 3, a day before the city boarded up the dilapidated structure on Broadway.

The Squires also filed a claim for damages against the city, arguing its notice to vacate was issued without due process and in violation of the couple's civil rights. Much of the language in the Squires' claim is identical to that in claims submitted by tenants the same day. "The city of Eureka has scared and harassed my tenants to the point of creating a mental breakdown and resulting physical side effects, as well as economic effects," read the Squires' claim. The tenants' claims each include the line: "The city of Eureka has scared and harassed me to the point of creating a mental breakdown and resulting physical side effects."

Several of the claims include letters from the tenants as attachments, which are also nearly identical and include the line: "The resident manager assisted me with this filing." The letters also say, "This room is my home and my long term residence. I pay rent by the month and will continue to do so."

Attempts to contact the people who filed the claims were unsuccessful, as none of phone numbers listed in the claims — including some cell phones — were operable. One of the claims listed a phone number that was only nine numbers long.

There are other peculiarities about the claims. For example, two of the claimants' names are spelled differently at various points in the paperwork. Another includes a signature for a 10-day-old baby.

December car chase, returned to full duty at the end of January. He was placed on leave after a Dec. 15 shooting that left 25-year-old suspect Andrea Frances Hunsucker with a gunshot wound to the hand. A shooting review committee found he didn't violate any departmental policies or procedures, and the county's Critical Incident Response Team's investigation into the shooting is ongoing.

Aponte was on patrol in McKinleyville at about 9 p.m. on Dec. 15 when he attempted to stop a black SUV, having learned that the vehicle's owner had an outstanding felony arrest warrant. The vehicle reportedly failed to stop and eventually turned down a private driveway, according to the sheriff's office, and Aponte followed.

"At this time, the suspect vehicle attempted to drive back out of the driveway toward the (deputy's) location, at which time shots were fired by the deputy sheriff," a press release said. The vehicle was occupied by two people — Hunsucker and 23-year-old Michael Lawrence Barret, who fled into the woods and was arrested early the next morning and booked into jail for a parole violation. Hunsucker remains at large, but a warrant has been issued for her arrest.

Sheriff's office Lt. Wayne Hanson said the sheriff's office does not have a policy that specifically addresses if or when it's appropriate for an officer to shoot at a moving car. "You don't want to box your personnel into a corner as far as options when it comes to their lives," Hanson said.

Eureka and Arcata have more restrictive policies in place.

The Arcata Police Department's policy begins by noting that "shots fired at or from a moving vehicle are rarely effective" and says officers should "move out of the path of an approaching vehicle instead of discharging their firearm at the vehicle or any of its occupants." The policy states that officers should only fire on moving vehicles if they "reasonably believe" there are no other reasonable means to avert the threat, or if "deadly force other than the vehicle is directed at" them or others.

Eureka Police Chief Andy Mills said he's updating and revising his department's policy to state that shooting at or from a moving vehicle is "generally prohibited" and state that "officers shall move out of the path of a moving vehicle rather than discharging a firearm" at the vehicle or its occupants. But, Mills said the policy will allow officers to open fire if there are no other "reasonable means" to protect themselves or others from an immediate threat.

Tax Returns

By Grant Scott-Goforth

grant@northcoastjournal.com

A weeeeeird thing is happening in Colorado. All of the tax money the state collected from recreational marijuana transactions during its first year of legalization — $44 million from the 28 percent sales tax — has to be returned, thanks to a tax loophole in the state's constitution.

While high state revenues must have been a selling point to reluctant voters who approved recreational legalization in 2012, the $44 million figure was actually underwhelming compared to government estimates.

But Colorado law has a provision protecting against unnecessary new taxes. Specifically, the state constitution says a new voter-approved tax (like that on marijuana, which followed voter approval of legal weed) can only go into effect when the state needs the money. In 2014 a strong economy boosted overall tax revenue beyond state projections, meaning money from the new pot tax must be returned.

How the state will do that has yet to be determined; it can dole out $44 million in checks to all income tax payers, or it can stop charging sales tax on weed for a year. At least one state senator has said that will harm the drug programs and schools that were slated to get money, and is pushing to ask voters to go ahead and let the state keep the revenue.

That could go either way. While many non-users likely approved legalization for the tax boon to schools, it's hard to imagine people turning down a government issued check (even for a paltry half-eighth sum). Some dispensary owners reportedly like the tax, as it legitimizes their enterprises, but their customers — who paid more than $8 in taxes on a $30 eighth last year — probably wouldn't complain about a year's worth of tax-free weed.

Even the tax-leery Right has waffled on its give-us-back-our-money stance. The Associated Press reported that, while state Republicans typically oppose the government keeping refunds guaranteed by the state constitution, they think pot should "pay for itself."

One if by land, two if by university? The suits keep coming: The former head of the University of Nevada, Reno was recently awarded one of the city's first medical marijuana business licenses. Joe Crowley, who was well liked at the university, according to the Reno Gazette-Journal, said his brother and sister used marijuana to relieve pain from multiple sclerosis and surgeries.

I'm going to make an assumption (yes, I know what happens when I assume) that there's a big crossover between Humboldt County's legion of anti-vaxxers and those who enjoy and/or grow weed. So be wary of exploding heads, as the new surgeon general, who has been touring the nation promoting vaccination, also recently told CBS This Morning that marijuana "can be helpful" for certain conditions and symptoms. Vivek Murthy called for science-driven marijuana policies, but came short of calling for legalization like former Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders and one-time surgeon general candidate Sanjay Gupta.

The buzzkillers at the Mateel Community Center squashed your chance to drop the kids while you float around the Ganjier Spring Kickoff this coming weekend. Though the festival initially advertised a "Kid's Zone" nestled between the Law Offices of Kathleen Bryson and the Pure Analytics Cannabis Potency and Safety Screening booths (where little Jack and Jill would presumably be soothed by the sweet sounds of SoHum Girls and EZ Money from the nearby stage), the Mateel's board raised its jack boots and curbed the notion of anyone under 18 getting into the festival, "even in a designated kids area," according to event organizers.

Maybe grandma can look after them.

BIG BEER

Eurekans spent $700,000 to expand Lost Coast Brewery — what will they get in return? Story and photos by Grant Scott-Goforth

Humboldt County's most famous beer maker is a gleaming icon of the modern age of the craft industry. Lost Coast Brewery, the little homebrew-turned-café operation in Podunk Eureka, is putting the finishing touches on a state-of-the-art, $27 million mega-brewery, which will allow the company to expand its worldwide distribution.

The company's new facility is built on a foundation of hard work, a lot of malt and hops, and a lot of public money: The city spent nearly $700,000 in site-specific improvements at the company's new south Eureka site. It was a community investment, said city officials who approved the spending, but it came at a time when Eureka raised taxes to cover basic services, and when questions are being raised around the nation about the billions of dollars that small communities gift to large companies every year.

Lost Coast Brewery

is one of Humboldt's darlings, a bootstrap, follow-your-dreams success story referenced constantly by the county's politicians, organizations and titans of commerce.

The brewery was founded in 1990 by Barbara Groom and Wendy Pound, who had been researching beer and converted Eureka's Pythian Castle on Fourth Street into a café and tasting room. The city, apparently, did not make it easy for Groom and Pound to start their business, but the pair eventually gained the council's support.

The brewery cultivated a local following and before long, thanks in part to marketing and distinctive labels by Humboldt illustrator-precious Duane Flatmo, its flagship beers gained popularity outside of the county.

The brewery eventually outgrew the downtown restaurant, moving to a west Eureka site where it grew steadily to become the 33rd largest craft brewer in the nation, pumping out 50,000 barrels in 2009. With other medium-size breweries, like Healdsburg's Bear Republic, hot on its tail, Lost Coast has floated around the mid-30s rankings in craft brewery size. By the late 2000s, Groom was ready to expand again, and began looking for sites that could accommodate a large, state-of-the-art brewing facility.

The brewery had faced challenges before: a less than welcoming council at its inception, growing pains and a to-do over the label for its flagship Indica Pale Ale. In 2004, a Bay Area man sued the brewery, claiming the image of Hindu deity Ganesh slamming a brewski on the Flatmo-designed label was offensive. Despite winning on the grounds of free speech, the brewery changed the label. But apparently the original found its way onto the brewery's website again in 2009, sparking outrage from Indian newspapers and bomb threats against the company.

But none of these would be quite as drawn out and contentious as when Groom set her eyes on a south Eureka piece of property, a 9-acre pastoral parcel owned by the Santa Rosa Roman Catholic Diocese that butted up against the county border behind the Flamingo Motel on South Broadway. In the three years it took to gain approval and construct the massive facility, Groom would deal with city planners, wildlife advocates, Native American tribes, angry neighbors and a plumbers union boycott.

On a tour of Lost Coast's new brewing facility with Congressman Jared Huffman in October, Groom clearly still chafed at the hurdles it took to get the plant built. She said it took three years to get final city approval because of a wildflower study and "two cultural studies because of politics with the Indians.

"Most people would have walked away, but I didn't have anything else to do,"

BREWERY OWNER BARBARA GROOM TOLD NORTH COAST CONGRESSMAN JARED HUFFMAN THAT LOST COAST BEERS SELL IN CALIFORNIA, FLORIDA, SOUTH KOREA AND SOME EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.

Groom said, getting a laugh from attendees of the tour.

Whether joking or not about walking away from the project, the attitude doesn't really jibe with Groom's actions, or her ambitions. She said she wants Lost Coast Brewery in the top 20 craft breweries in the nation, and took on a $27 million debt, which she said won't be paid off in her lifetime, to complete the brewery's impressive new bottling facility. The company will be able to produce 300,000 barrels — 99 million bottles of beer — per year once it's running at full capacity. Hardly the kind of project someone would have a take-it-or-leave-it mindset about.

Plus Groom was hardly a victim of a foot-dragging bureaucracy. During negotiations, she threatened to move the facility outside of Eureka. This scared a business-friendly city council: After all, Lost Coast Brewery, with its 30 or so production jobs, was the oft-touted crown jewel of Eureka's commerce community.

So the city fell all over itself to accommodate Groom, amending the general plan to reclassify the property from public to commercial and, eventually, giving Lost Coast Brewery a nearly $700,000 gift.

The new Lost Coast

Brewery is located just east of U.S. Highway 101 on Sunset Road; its new peaked roof can barely be seen as you zip north into Eureka. A year ago, Sunset Road was a small gravel roadway that connected to a small subdivision overlooking Humboldt Bay. Those homes lie east and southeast of the new brewery on Weiler Road. To the south of the building is the Sunset Memorial Park graveyard; to the west, the Flamingo Motel and Patriot gas station; and to the north sits a pasture.

As the brewery went through the city's planning process, a small number of neighbors began to voice concerns about the project. It would be stinky, they said, and would increase traffic along Sunset Road. It would diminish their views and create a new source of industrial noise and light. Their opposition, Groom implied, put a kibosh on the idea of having a restaurant at the facility.

Despite this, Groom had the upper hand, which was made clear by the city council's unanimous approval in November 2012 to commit up to $825,000 in city funds to water, sewer and road improvements to aid the brewery's construction. Initial cost estimates, which came in at $534,000, more than $100,000 under the final price of the improvements, showed funding amounts from the following sources: $96,000 from the water fund; $87,000 from the sewer fund; $285,000 from the street improvements fund; and $65,000 from the city's general fund, which pays for most essential day-to-day services like the police and fire departments.

That spending decision came a year after the council voted to increase water rates for city residents to compensate for higher costs from the Humboldt County Water District as well as to fund infrastructure projects. At the end of five years of incremental hikes, Eureka customers were expected to pay about $20 more per month for water.

Lost Coast Brewery also has what the city refers to as "high-strength discharge," meaning its wastewater requires heavier treatment than average residential users. Public Works Director Bruce Young said the brewery is billed accordingly, and that the new facility appears as though it may be discharging lower strength discharge than the previous site (though it will continue to be charged as a high-strength wastewater producer).

Young also said the city is working on pretreatment options with the brewery — and other high-strength dischargers — to keep remnants from the beer making process from entering the sewer system. “There is value to reducing these elements at the source,” he wrote in an email.

At the 2012 meeting, then-City Manager David Tyson pitched the idea:

“We’ve fought very hard to keep Barbara with her business here. ... The city is partnering with Lost Coast Brewery by providing some of the required public improvements for the project — roads and streets, curb and gutter, water and sewer lines — to service this project, to service the community and to provide a location that Barbara can expand into. ... This certainly would go a long ways in helping this project and the neighborhood as well in developing this area of our community.”

It’s unclear if, beyond the paving of Sunset Road, the Weiler Road neighbors, who live just outside of the city limits in county jurisdiction, will see any benefit from the sewer and water line improvements.

Councilwoman Marian Brady pointed out that Arcata invested in similar infrastructure improvements to develop its Aldergrove Industrial Park in the 1980s. Since then, dozens of manufacturing and food businesses have settled in the area in the north part of the city. But unlike Arcata’s investments, Eureka’s Sunset Road improvements seem to only benefit one business: Lost Coast Brewery. In addition, Aldergrove was designed, in part, to help fledgling businesses get off the ground, rather than to help an already profitable company expand.

In total, the city, through contractor Mercer-Fraser, spent $686,156 on the project: $212,446 on water system improvements, $143,169 on wastewater improvements and $330,541 installing and paving sidewalks, driveways and roads on Sunset Road and the outlet onto Broadway.

(To put that into perspective, Eureka could have paid the entry-level salaries of 16 firefighters or 14 police officers for a year for the same cost.) The work was completed last summer.

Tyson told the council in 2012 that these types of city investments are “not that unusual.”

“In the 1990s we did quite extensive road improvements, water and sewage improvements, and drainage improvements in the west side using redevelopment bond financing,” Tyson said. But redevelopment funds, handed down from the state, were specifically targeted to promote businesses and infrastructure, while general fund spending — like that $65,000 spent on the Lost Coast Brewery infrastructure — takes directly away from other city services.

While there are typically negotiations between cities and developers about who foots the bill for infrastructure costs, it has become quite common for cities, large and small, to entice businesses to set up — or expand — shop with taxpayer money.

In a 2012 investigation, the New York Times tallied thousands of state, county and city incentives around the nation: cash grants and loans; sales, income and property tax credits; and infrastructure improvements that total more than $80 billion a year.

“For local governments, incentives have become the cost of doing business with almost every business. The Times found that the awards go to companies big and small, those gushing in profits and those sinking in losses, American companies and foreign companies, and every industry imaginable.

“A full accounting,” The Times article says, “is not possible because the incentives are granted by thousands of government agencies and officials, and many do not know the value of all their awards. Nor do they know if the money was worth it because they rarely track how many jobs are created. Even where officials do track incentives, they acknowledge that it is impossible to know whether the jobs would have been created without the aid.”

Much of the practice began with officials’ fears that companies would move jobs overseas, the article reported.

“Over the years, corporations have increasingly exploited that fear, creating a high-stakes bazaar where they pit local officials against one another to get the most lucrative packages. States compete with other states, cities compete with surrounding suburbs, and even small towns have entered the race with the goal of defeating their neighbors.”

Whether public officials, tasked with deciding what’s best for the city at large, were motivated by fear or hope, they largely supported the brewery’s expansion.

City Engineer Charles Roecklein recently defended the spending, saying the “city council and city management felt it was a very good investment in our city infrastructure to support that business out there.”

In approving the project in 2012, Councilwoman Brady said, “I think it’s going to get paid back in a lot faster fashion than what we are anticipating.”

In its 2012 staff report, the city projected that the investment in Lost Coast’s new facility would be returned in seven years. Equipment purchases alone would yield $150,000 in sales tax the year the brewery was built, the report said.

Beer, retail and ice cream sales at the new facility will bring additional tax revenue, but it's unclear how much the city anticipated will be sold there. Instead, the staff report somewhat disingenuously factored sales tax collected at the existing restaurant — money the city would be collecting, expansion or not — into the seven year plan.

The report also anticipated the city would collect $32,000 a year in property taxes, but, by the Journal's calculations, it would take 323 years for the city to recoup the costs of infrastructure development it incurred with the Lost Coast project with property tax alone. According to the Humboldt County Tax Collector's Office, the company is scheduled to pay $84,000 in property taxes this year, only 2.5 percent of which — just over $2,100 — will go back to the city of Eureka.

At the 2012 meeting, Councilwoman Melinda Ciarabellini praised Groom for creating job opportunities. "It's a great project," she said. "Really what jumped off the page here is you're already providing 30 jobs — I've forgotten how many more jobs this will increase — and it is going to be a great boon to the community."

In a 2012 re-election campaign op-ed in the Times-Standard, Councilwoman Linda Atkins wrote, "this expansion will provide more living-wage jobs and attract more tourists."

Atkins did not return a call seeking comment for this story. Councilwoman Natalie Arroyo, elected after the city approved funding, declined to comment.

It appears that jobs have increased — Groom did not respond to requests for comment for this story, but told reporters during a tour in October that 40 to 50 people were working on the bottling line, up from 30 at the old plant. But it appears her goal was to actually reduce the number of workers at the new facility, as she also told reporters that she "was hoping to cut down on people but we need more people on this bottling line than the old one" because kinks were still being worked out. She estimated things would be running efficiently by spring.

Groom's expansion

also stirred controversy at the end of 2013, when it was discovered by a local plumber's union that she hired out-of-town contractors to complete construction work on the facility. The United Association Local 290, Plumber and Steamfitters promoted a boycott of Lost Coast Brewery products, and association spokesman Craig Spjut wrote in an op-ed in the Times-Standard, "living wages for local workers make for strong community economies, which is why we are disappointed in Lost Coast Brewery's choice to outsource local work opportunities."

Groom, in response (she did not return Journal calls seeking comment at the time), wrote in the Times-Standard that she had gone to "extraordinary lengths" to hire local plumbers, and offered this slightly damning evidence of her commitment to the local community: "With a national product it makes no sense to invest in Eureka. It's located at the edge of the earth, transportation is difficult and expensive, unpolluted industrial land is nonexistent, utility infrastructure is poor, and the place isn't getting better."

Whether the city spent the money wisely — and we may never know, due to the hazy metrics of city subsidies — the deal's done. The facility is massive, modern and running at full operation, with some efficiencies still in progress, according to customer service representative Jaqueline Martin. The company is expanding its line of beers and will be canning beer sometime in the future. While the downtown restaurant thrives, the south Eureka site will offer tours, a tasting room, retail shop and ice cream parlor; Martin said the company hopes to have it open by summertime.

Then, Eureka's will have a chance to see what their tax dollars helped build. ●

The Three P's of Spring

By Heather Jo Flores

downanddirty@northcoastjournal.com

It's February again, and time to start planting. Growing a garden is one of the best ways to get exercise, spend time outdoors and improve your diet and sense of food security, but sometimes it can be difficult to find the motivation. To get back into the swing of things, I like to start with what I call the Three P's of Spring: peas, poppies and potatoes.

Peas:

Gardeners always tell me that their homegrown peas never make it out of the garden because the gardener eats them first, and I say, "that's just fine." Fresh peas are a wonderful way to lure yourself into the field, and once you've filled your belly, you might as well do some work! Peas come in many forms: snap peas and snow peas have an edible pod and are delicious raw or in stir fry. Shelling peas yield larger peas inside an inedible pod, so you have to peel them, but the flavor is well worth the work. Bush peas don't need a trellis and can be planted anywhere in the garden. Trailing varieties need a trellis, so plant them against a fence or around a cage.

For bush peas, I like Oregon Giant and Sugar Ann. Sugar Snap is a good choice for a trailing snap pea, but my favorite pea of all time is Alderman, a shelling variety with a rich, buttery flavor. Sow seeds directly into well-prepared soil. To boost germination, add a bacterial inoculant (available at most garden stores,) or pre-sprout them in a jar with a bit of water for a few days ahead of time. Sow the seeds 2 inches deep and cover. Be sure to protect them from slugs and snails. My favorite way to do this is by sprinkling a tiny ring of black pepper around each seedling.

Poppies:

There are many different kinds of annual and perennial poppies that will do well in almost any climate, but my favorite are the Papaver somniferum, also known as bread-seed poppies or opium poppies. It's perfectly legal to grow the flowers and the seeds are edible and rich in nutrients. Scoring the pods for their opiate properties is, however, highly illegal. I've always grown them for the stunning flowers, which come in a vast array of pinks, purples, reds and whites. Varieties of bread-seed poppies can be found with single flowers (just a few large petals), doubles (dozens of smaller petals) and hens-and-chicks, which have a bunch of tiny flowers around a large flower in the middle. Plant three or four of the tiny seeds into small hills placed at least 3 feet apart, then thin the sprouts down to one plant per hill. Poppies are extremely heavy feeders and need a lot of space to grow. If you plant them too close together, they will bloom when very tiny and you will miss out on the true glory of a 4-foot tall poppy plant, boasting dozens of giant flowers. To fill all that space between your poppy hills, plant light feeders, such as lettuce, radishes or bush peas.

Potatoes:

There are as many kinds of potatoes as there are colors in the rainbow. I like to mix them up in plantings so that every harvest yields a basket of rich diversity. Potatoes can grow in just about anything and are a good choice for pioneering new areas in your garden. They also make a nice border, and if you plant them along a dirt pathway, you can use the dirt later to hill up your young potato plants. To prepare the spuds for planting, cut them into sections with no less than two eyes per section. Coat the moist flesh in wood ash to prevent mold after planting. Plant the pieces 8 inches apart in a narrow trench 6 inches deep and cover with an inch of soil. As they grow, continue covering the little plants with soil. Do this about once a week until the trench is level with the ground, then continue to hill them up with soil from the path, or just pile on leaves or straw. The more you hill them, the more they will yield. After they have bloomed, wait until the plants start to wilt. Now you are ready to start harvesting. You can either dig them all up at once, or just root around in the dirt and mulch and pull out one meal at a time. ●

Twenty short years ago, a friend and I chanced upon the trail that leads from Dry Lagoon to Stone Lagoon but our exploration was quickly thwarted by an expanse of thick, black mud. That trail continued calling to me, and a few months ago, after our recent long drought, I had a notion the trail might be passable. So on a fine morning I strode north from the Dry Lagoon parking lot toward the beckoning ridge.

The trail up was clearly used, but I was grateful for my long-sleeved shirt as I ploughed through the sharp leaves of pampas grass that crowd the first 100 yards or so of climbing. Five minutes later I discovered that the mud was still there despite the drought, but had been made passable by plastic honeycomb embedded in the goo, giving the walker tenuous ridges to walk on. Someone had thoughtfully strewn skunk cabbage leaves across the deepest part where standing water overflowed the honeycombs, so I made it across easily and safely with my feet still dry.

The trail followed a gentle contour line through a dark, silent stand of old Sitka spruce to a bright sunny stretch where chickadees flitted in the bushes, dispelling the silence with their persistent chatter. Descending the north face of the ridge, the trail wound in and out of sunshine through a mixed alder forest, and I caught glimpses of Stone Lagoon sparkling below. This side of the ridge hosts several more springs, and their beds were also still wet despite the lack of rain. But unlike their unruly counterpart on the south side of the ridge, these all crossed the path in fairly narrow channels, which are spanned by simple, sturdy wooden bridges. Each shady grotto supported a variety of ferns, and old stumps hosted many more.

Near the bottom of the trail I encountered a smaller path heading uphill to the west. Immediately in front of me the main trail was in poor shape. Was the uphill path a detour? I didn't know, and correctly decided to stay with the main trail heading down. In a few minutes I came to the last bridge, this one clad in mosses and lichens, missing a few boards and a bit lopsided and twisty. I crossed it carefully.

At my ambling pace, it took me an hour and 45 minutes to reach Ryan's Cove at the end of the trail. I ate lunch in a shady spot looking out at Stone Lagoon, which had little white caps dancing across it. I then checked out the six campsites, each equipped with fire ring, picnic table and bear box. Two of them offered lagoon views and even came with stacked firewood.

On my way back, I decided to follow the trail I had bypassed earlier. I climbed through a stand of alder where the sound of wind rustling the leaves mixed with the crashing of waves on the beach in the distance. Traffic noises were washed out. I stopped to listen to the leaves and waves and then continued at a slower pace. The trail had several muddy spots and, aside from a single foot-bridge, showed no sign of maintenance. In about 20 minutes I arrived at a tiny cove close to the ocean, and headed toward the beach. The land soon opened out, and I ventured along a secondary route toward the ridge where I could just see the top of a wooden structure. I was surprised to find a ceremonial hut of hand hewn wood as well as a fire ring farther along the trail. I later found a map of this area showing a Yurok town called Tsahepek at this location.

I generally don't mind returning on the same path, as I always see things that I missed going the other direction. This was true here, too, as I noticed the profusion of berry bushes — native blackberry, huckleberry, salmonberry — that bordered the trail.

By the time I started back across the beach at Dry Lagoon, the late afternoon sun glinted off the leaves of beach morning glories and sand verbena growing on the low, flat dunes. I explored the area east of the trail, which was a fascinating illustration of local ecology. Hundreds of large driftwood pieces were scattered there, and next to them a bonsai Sitka spruce valiantly clung to life. Scat of rabbits, deer and elk were evidence of a healthy animal population.

My rambling trek had taken almost seven hours. The main trail is about 2 ½ miles long, and someone out for a brisk hike could cover the entire distance in half the time. I plan to return in less than 20 years, next time during berry season. ●

Chinese recipes I totally stole

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

I was a puffy-faced cliché, freshly dumped and lurching around the apartment I'd shared with my boyfriend of four years, stuffing my things into a duffle bag under the bored gaze of our unsympathetic cat. As I scanned the rooms for the bulky sweaters and sad books I'd need to really nail the self-pity, the tipped-out edge of a folder on the bookcase caught my attention. It was my ex's archive of Chinese recipes, some in his mother's looping handwriting, others in his own spiky capitals — recipes I'd watched him transcribe over the phone with his aunts in San Francisco, the same aunts who constantly asked if he's met any nice Chinese girls. Ingredients and instructions he could certainly ask for again from a web of relatives I'd never see again. I dropped my bag and leafed through a few, suddenly laser-focused. Mine. In the bag they went.

You could call it the act of a woman scorned, but the truth is the breakup was pretty amicable. It was sheer greed. I could accept having my 20-something heart broken but I was not giving up the chili prawns. Or the lemon chicken or the other dishes from a generation of Chinese-American cooking that aimed for traditional flavors and shrugged at necessary substitutions, marvelous old-school standards I'd taken for granted at countless Sunday dinners, Thanksgivings and backyard birthday parties for a long-dead grandfather.

Chinese New Year falls on Feb. 19 this year, taking us into the Year of the Ram (or Goat or Sheep, depending on whom you ask). What could be more auspicious for the occasion than plates of bright, spicy, red chili prawns and golden lemon chicken? Maybe something cooked from heirloom recipes that weren't shamelessly purloined under the cover of emotional distress. A sheepish gung hay fat choy to you then.

Chili Prawns

Ingredients and method:
¾ pound raw medium shrimp, shelled, de-veined and rinsed
1 ½ tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons fresh garlic, chopped
1 green onion, minced
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 dash of white pepper
1 ½ teaspoon chili paste with garlic
1 ½ tablespoon ketchup
1 ¼ tablespoon oyster sauce
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons white wine
1 ½ tablespoons sesame oil

Drain the shrimp in a colander and pat off the excess water with a paper towel. Toss the shrimp in a bowl with the salt, pepper and cornstarch, then set them aside.

In another bowl, mix the chili paste, ketchup, oyster sauce, sugar, white wine and sesame oil.

In a wok or frying pan, heat the oil and garlic over medium heat until the garlic is fragrant, but not browning. Turn the heat to high and stir-fry the shrimp for 2 minutes. Add the sauce mixture and cook for 1 more minute. Plate the dish and garnish with the green onions.

Lemon Chicken

Ingredients and method:
2 boneless and skinless chicken breasts cut into 1-inch chunks
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon sesame oil
2 tablespoons dry sherry
1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup vegetable oil
¼ cup cornstarch
¼ cup flour
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup white vinegar
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup water mixed with ¾ teaspoon cornstarch

Marinate the chicken in the soy sauce, sesame oil, sherry, garlic and salt for about an hour. Remove the meat and toss it in a mixture of the flour and cornstarch.

In a small saucepan, heat the lemon juice, vinegar, sugar and water with cornstarch over medium-high heat. Let it boil for 1 minute, thickening to a thin syrup.

In a heavy pan or wok, heat the vegetable oil over high heat and fry the chicken pieces until golden brown, turning them to brown evenly. Place the fried chicken on a paper towel to remove excess oil.

Plate the chicken (over lettuce leaves is nice) and drizzle it with the lemon sauce before serving. ●

THE SETLIST

By the Dozen

Potentially perfect options for a polysonic spree

By Jennifer Savage

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

Humboldt! I hope you've been getting enough sleep and eating well because we've got a busy weekend ahead. Please note the following options and plan accordingly.

Thursday: Stellar hip-hop

Call this the "most legit show of the week": Oakland hip-hop duo Zion I, with special guests Los Rakas and Locksmith at the Arcata Theatre Lounge. On the heels of the boom-bap oriented Masters of Ceremony EP, Zion I drops Libations, the reflective second installment of their three-part series. The album's more introspective feel stems from a friend of the band passing away suddenly — Zion I refers to the record as "a prayer" in some ways, a sonic "pouring out" to a lost friend. Doors at 9 p.m., music at 10 p.m., tickets $18 advance at Wildberries, People's Records and The Works, $20 general, show is 21-and-over.

Friday: Electronic ecstasy

Taking over Toph's down in Garberville is MartyParty, a South African-born, Brooklyn native who's been busy seducing North America with his varying flavors of hip-hop, trap, dubstep and EDM. Tickets are $18, available in advance from www.brownpapertickets.com. Show starts at 9 p.m. Bring an ID if you're hoping to buy booze.

Friday: You will get down

Arcata's reigning 10-piece heavy funk band Motherlode is revving up for an exciting year of touring and a new album, says drummer Pete Ciotti. The band is kicking things off with a gig at the Jambalaya, with popular local faves Liquid Kactus opening. Tickets are $10 and available at the door, which opens at 9 p.m. Show is 21-and-over.

WHEN: Thursday, Feb. 19 at 10 p.m.

Friday: Hey, an alt-rock show!

Brooklyn-based, Americana-influenced rock band Animal Years plays at Humboldt Brews with A-town/C-City's Fire Pony opening. Tickets are only $10, show is 21-and-over and begins at 9 p.m. Trivia bonus: Animal Years' video for "Forget What They're Telling You" stars True Blood's Bailey Noble.

Friday: Low-effort option

Want to just kick back with a cocktail and enjoy some retro-rock? The Bucket Listers play for free at the The Clam Beach Inn, 9 p.m., 21-and-over.

Saturday: From the City of Angels

Josephine Johnson returns to Arcata to perform her signature style of lyric-driven, post-folk rock at the Arcata Playhouse. Johnson, who relocated to Los Angeles last January and has been involved in that city's music scene, is looking forward to her Arcata return. "Getting back to Humboldt puts me in touch with my roots, the formative years of my songwriting," she said, "and I will get to play music with some of the kindest, hardest working musicians in the community.” Joining her for the night will be guitarist Piet Dalmolen (Free Rain, Full Moon Fever), bassist Dan Davis (Wild Otis) and drummer Jay Forbes (Strix Vega, Full Moon Fever). Local acid-country, gloom-grass duo Electro Saloon (Colin Begell, Alanna Powell) open — their sound a comforting twang of pensive lyrics and decisive fiddle. The evening also showcases local art and poetry with Therese FitzMaurice and Matt Beard.

Johnson is asking showgoers to bring one or more canned food items for a Food for People collection barrel. Food and money go directly to support Food for People’s recovery efforts after having lost a full shipment of food when a delivery vehicle perished in a fiery crash in December. Tickets are $12 in advance and $15 at the door. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. with the show beginning at 8 p.m.

Saturday: Murder ballads

Frank Fairfield takes you into the darkness and leads you out through the other side via old-timey down-home songs straight out of Appalachia. Think of it as an existential confirmation — with fiddle, guitar and banjo. He’s joined by Meredith Axelrod at the Sanctuary. Doors at 7:30 p.m., tickets $10 to $20 at the door. All ages.

Saturday: Better than church

Singer-songwriter Ryan Montbleau’s music is the kind that makes you happier and a better person for listening. Find him at Humboldt Brews with compatriot and fellow “road dog” Cris Jacobs, former frontman of Baltimore’s The Bridge. Tickets are $15, doors at 9 p.m., 21-and-over.

Saturday: ‘Sweet and dread’

I’m going to go with the artist’s description here: “Sammy Dread epitomizes the magical radiance of the Jamaican roots singer who delivers a visionary philosophy that yearns for a stolen past and knows that music must be both sweet and dread for people to understand.” This roots reggae gig is at the Jambalaya, 10 p.m., $15, 21-and-over.

Saturday: Hey, a punk show!

Ensuring we have a punk rock option: Arcata’s The Mother Vines and Eureka’s Dead Drift at the Alibi, 11 p.m., $3, 21-and-over. Dead Drift notes, “We are a traditional punk rock trio from Arcata drawing comparisons to The Lawrence Arms.” Consider yourselves informed.

Sunday: Deeply delicious electropop

Another big show at the ATL — Giraffage aka San Francisco-based producer and beat guru Charlie Yin, makes a stop on his No Reason Tour, with Spazzkid and Rhizae. Giraffage’s signature sound has won him praise from musical tastemakers Pitchfork (“dynamism and depth that’s always powered his music”) and XLR8R (“bedroom dream pop”), which sounds pretty sweet, right? Doors open at 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $25, recommended in advance and the show is 21-and-over.

Wednesday:

San Francisco’s Howlin’ Rain offers an invigorating combination of psychedelic blues, funk and classic 1970s stadium rock at Humboldt Brews. The Blank Tapes open. Tickets are $15, show starts at 9 p.m., 21-and-over.

Etc.

Full show listings in the Journal’s Music and More grid, the Eight Days a Week calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoast-journal.com. ●

Red Carpet Moment

Before you get caught up in Oscar fever, see if the next Martin Scorsese, Kathryn Bigelow or Billy Wilder is waiting to be discovered at Humboldt State University right now. Go beyond indie on Friday, Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. in the Van Duzer Theatre when the HSU Film Showcase gets rolling (free). It's the premiere of eight student films, and who knows, maybe the beginning of a legacy.

Then on Sunday, Feb. 22, it's the gowns, the tuxes, the flashbulbs! The air kisses and barely disguised rivalries! And that's just in the lobby. Make an entrance at the Eureka Theater at 5 p.m. for the Red Carpet Gala ($30, $25 advance). Unless you want to watch the Oscars on the couch with Cheeto-stained fingers and nobody to appreciate your spot-on predictions. Again.

The theater and the Humboldt-Del Norte Film commission are putting on the ritz with schmoozing in the lobby and a big-screen broadcast of the Academy Awards. Servers will be sweeping in with trays of all sorts of tasty finger foods from Brett Shuler Fine Catering (mingle, converse, but don't lose sight of those canapés), and that schmancy bar will be cranking out glamorous cocktails all evening. Folks at home will be yawning through commercials, but you'll be watching the drama onstage as presenters hand out Humboldt's own awards. Have a speech prepared just in case (unless you're Leonardo DiCaprio), act surprised (unless you're Meryl Streep) and don't forget to thank your mom.

With a Capital V

On Friday, Feb. 20 through Sunday, Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. at the D Street Community Center in Arcata, keep the V-Day momentum going with the annual performance of founder Eve Ensler's play The Vagina Monologues, directed by Carly Sherman ($10, $8 seniors and students).

The play, which has seen updates, revisions and controversy over the years since its first off-Broadway performance in 1996, was born from interviews with some 200 women. It features a number of female characters talking about life, love and lady parts. They cover birth, sex, menstruation, orgasms, sex work, rape and the c-word. It's a lot, so good thing it's funny, too. Ensler's empowering messages about female sexuality and identity fit right in with V-Day's mission of raising funds and awareness to end violence against women and girls. Who can't get behind that?

Reviews

FIFTY SHADES OF GREY. As my wife was quick to point out, my very presence at some movies could, to a stranger, pose problems. And she's not wrong: The lone man in his 30s attending a cartoon matinee is the tamer, lamer analog of the guy in the van by the playground. I try to manifest kindness in these situations, to wordlessly allay the fears of concerned parents around me. But other people are going to formulate their own twisted scenarios, regardless. Never have I been more aware of this than while watching Fifty Shades of Grey in a room full of excited women.

My wife read the books and got a kick out of them — like everybody else — even while realizing that they are thematically dubious literary trash. Enough time has passed by now that the cheap thrill has worn off, so there was no convincing her to join me. In all honesty, it didn't really even occur to me that it might seem creepy, or a little off, to go to the first major Hollywood sex movie in years by myself. At least not until I got there. (I wasn't ostracized or made to leave; just felt vaguely uncomfortable and out of place.)

When her roommate falls ill, bright-eyed, naïve college senior Anastasia Steele (Dakota Johnson) volunteers to help complete an assignment. (Anastasia refers to herself as an "English Lit" major. I majored in English, and am the son of an English major. I don't know anybody who says "English Lit.") She drives to Seattle to profile eligible bachelor and billionaire Christian Grey (Jamie Dornan), an alumnus of her university, for the school newspaper. At first the interview seems like a disaster, with Anastasia's exaggerated awkwardness sucking the air out of the room. But for some reason — in context that reason is unclear — Christian is taken with her. He begins to actively pursue her, surprising her with extravagant gifts and lavish dates. She's into it, but there's a twist. After deflowering her, Christian informs Anastasia of his fondness for bondage and dominance. He then presents her with a multi-page contract/non-disclosure agreement regarding the nature of their proposed relationship. She spends much of the rest of the movie debating whether to sign the contract. Meanwhile she's learning that she really enjoys getting tied up and spanked in his elegant penthouse sex dungeon.

Ostensibly, the central conflict is an internal one: Anastasia has to wrestle with her definition of relationships and romantic love in the face of Christian's intense but ultimately depersonalized sexuality. At least I think that's the conflict, because this movie does little more than suggest it. I'll grant that the sex scenes are pretty sexy, but everything in between is borderline incoherent. Johnson strikes an appealing balance of composure and innocence, and delivers a few lines with expert comic timing, but the character she's playing, like Christian, is a muddle of contradictory reactions. It could be argued that our emotional selves are all messy and unpredictable, and thus that the movie is attempting nuance and authenticity. But the whole thing is so contrived, so antiseptic, that any truth that comes out of it seems accidental.

It's been a while since Hollywood took on sex and relationships with any courage. Date movies tend to be dumb comedies or lifeless dramas, so I applaud the fact that Fifty Shades director Sam Taylor-Johnson doesn't shy away from putting some sex on screen. I can't help but think that there are better, more exciting stories to be told, though. At the end I was less embarrassed about being the only lone male at the movie than I was for having sat through it at all. R. 125m.

KINGSMAN: THE SECRET SERVICE.

Writer/director Matthew Vaughn and comic book author Mark Millar last teamed on Kick-Ass (2010) which, funnily enough, starred Aaron Taylor-Johnson, spouse of Fifty Shades director Sam. Vaughn and Millar's collaboration was a fruitful one, an auspicious beginning to which Kingsman is a well-suited follow-up.

Gary "Eggsy" Unwin (Taron Egerton) is a bit of a London rude-boy, but well-meaning and probably too smart for his own good. He tends to stir the pot with the minions of his mum's low-rent thug boyfriend, among other pursuits, and is no stranger to the law. He is also, unbeknownst to him, the son of a military-man-turned-secret-agent in the service of Kingsman, an independent spy organization self-tasked with saving the world. He died saving the life of his friend Harry (Colin Firth), who figures he owes his fallen comrade's son a favor. He selects Eggsy as a candidate for Kingsman membership, and the young man's off on a rigorous trial process. Meanwhile, eccentric, color-coordinated tech billionaire Richmond Valentine (Samuel L. Jackson) is enacting a sinister plot to curb global warming and overpopulation.

Kingsman is charming, stylish, funny and exceptionally violent. One sequence in particular (a free-for-all in a Southern church/hate group), has more deaths and more inventive staging thereof than any single scene since maybe Kill Bill: Volume I. Firth is customarily great, but Egerton really steals the show, with a winning combination of good looks, dry humor and genuine emotion. This movie reminds us that a work of pure imagination, an adventure for adventure's sake, can be just what we need. R. 128m.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by SYLVIA TOWNSEND In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that SYLVIA TOWNSEND Be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on March 12, 2015 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Legal Notice
City of Arcata
Publicly Owned
Treatment Works
(POTW)

Pretreatment Program
Notice of Significant
Noncompliance of Industrial Waste Pretreatment
Requirements in 2014.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) General Pretreatment Regulations (40 CFR Part 403) requires the City of Arcata to annually publish a list of "Significant Industrial Users" which, during the previous calendar year, significantly violated applicable Pretreatment Standards or other Pretreatment Requirements.

For the purpose of this publication, "Pretreatment Standards" are "any regulation containing pollutant discharge limits established by the USEPA, or the City of Arcata which applies to Industrial Users. This term includes prohibitive discharge limits established pursuant to Section 403.5" (Section 403.3(j)). The term "Pretreatment Requirements" means any substantive or procedural requirement related to Pretreatment, other than a National Standard, imposed on an Industrial User (Section 403.3(r)). A Significant Industrial User is in "Significant Noncompliance" if its violation meets one or more of the following criteria:

(A) Chronic violations of wastewater Discharge limits, defined here as those in which 66 percent or more of all of the measurements taken for the same pollutant parameter during a 6-month period exceed (by any magnitude) a numeric Pretreatment Standard or Requirement, including instantaneous limits, as defined by 40 CFR 403.3(l);

(B) Technical Review Criteria (TRC) violations, defined here as those in which 33 percent or more of all of the measurements taken for the same pollutant parameter during a 6-month period equal or exceed the product of the applicable TRC (TRC=I.4 for BOD, TSS, fats, oil, and grease, and 1.2 for all other pollutants except pH);

(C) Any other violation of a Pretreatment Standard or Requirement as defined by 40 CFR 403.3(l) that the POTW determines has caused, alone or in combination with other Discharges, Interference or Pass Through (including endangering the health of POTW personnel or the general public);

(D) Any Discharge of a pollutant that has caused imminent endangerment to human health, welfare or to the environment or has resulted in the POTW's exercise of its emergency authority under paragraph (f)(1)(iv)(B) of 40 CFR 403 to halt or prevent such discharge;

(E) Failure to meet, within 90 days after the scheduled date, a compliance schedule milestone contained in a local control mechanism or enforcement order for starting construction, completing construction, or attaining final compliance;

(F) Failure to provide, within 45 days after the due date, required reports such as baseline monitoring reports, 90-day compliance reports, periodic self-monitoring reports, and reports on compliance with compliance schedules;

(G) Failure to accurately report noncompliance;

(H) Any other violation or group of violations, which may include a violation of Best Management Practices, which the POTW determines will adversely affect the operation or implementation of the local Pretreatment program.

In 2014 the following Industrial Users were in Significant Noncompliance of applicable Pretreatment Standards:

Cypress Grove Chevre was in Significant Noncompliance for discharges of Oil and Grease above Technical Review Criteria (TRC) in Quarter 1, Quarter 2, Quarter 3 and Quarter 4. Cypress Grove Chevre was in Significant Noncompliance for Chronic violations of wastewater discharge limits for Oil and Grease in Quarter 1, Quarter 2 and Quarter 3.

TS# 14-2100 NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED: 9/19/11. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state will be held by the duly appointed trustee, as shown below, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the property address or other common designation, if any shown herein. Trustor: Dan C. Dobbs, a single man Duly Appointed Trustee: Foreclosure Specialists LLC Recorded 9/28/11 as Instrument No. 2011-20136-7 of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Humboldt County, California, Date of Sale: Thursday, March 5, 2015 at 10:30 AM Place of Sale: On the steps to the front entrance to the County Courthouse, 825 5TH Street, Eureka, CA 95501 The common designation of the property is purported to be: 575 Connick Creek Road, Garberville, CA 95542 APN: 222-156-017 Estimated opening bid: $363,865.74 Beneficiary may elect to open bidding at a lesser amount. The total amount secured by said instrument as of the time of initial publication of this notice is stated above, which includes the total amount of the unpaid balance (including accrued and unpaid interest) and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of initial publication of this notice. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call the trustee's information line at 530-246-2727 or visit this Internet Web site: calforeclosures.biz, using the file number assigned to this case: TS #14-2100. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call the trustee's information line at 530-246-2727, Toll Free: 844-333-6766 or visit this Internet Web site: calforeclosures.biz, using the file number assigned to this case: TS # 14-2129. NOTICE OF PUBLIC AUCTION ON
TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY FOR DELINQUENT TAXES

Made pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3702

On, December 16, 2014, I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, was directed to conduct a public auction sale by the Board of Supervisors of Humboldt County, California. The tax-defaulted properties listed below are subject to the Tax Collector's power of sale and have been approved for sale by a resolution dated December 16 2014 of the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors.

The sale will be conducted at www.bid4assets.com, from March 21st through 23rd, 2015 as a public auction to the highest bidder for not less than the minimum bid as shown on this notice. Parcels receiving no bids will be re-offered at www.bid4assets.com on June 6th through 9th 2015 at a minimum price appropriate to stimulate competitive bidding. Research the item prior to bidding. Due diligence research is incumbent on the bidder. The winning bidder is legally obligated to purchase the item.

Only bids submitted via the Internet will be accepted. Pre-registration is required. Register on-line at Bid4Assets.com by March 17th 2015. Bidders must submit a refundable deposit of $2,500.00 electronically, certified check or money order at www.bid4assets.com. The deposit will be applied to the successful bidder's purchase price. Full payment and deed information indicating how title should be vested is required within 48 hours after the end of the sale. Terms of payment are limited to wire transfers, certified checks or money orders. A California transfer tax will be added to and collected with the purchase price and is calculated at $.55 per each $500 or fraction thereof.

All property is sold as is. The county and its employees are not liable for the failure of any electronic equipment that may prevent a person from participating in the sale.

The right of redemption will cease on Friday, March 20th, 2015, at 5 p.m. and properties not redeemed will be offered for sale. If the parcel is not sold, the right of redemption will revive and continue up to the close of business on the last business day prior to the next scheduled sale.

If the properties are sold, parties of interest, as defined in California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 4675, have a right to file a claim with the county for any excess proceeds from the sale. Excess proceeds are the amount of the highest bid in excess of the liens and costs of the sale that are paid from the sale proceeds.

More information may be obtained by contacting the Tax Collector at www.humboldt.gov or by calling (707) 476-2450 or toll free at 877-448-6829.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Assessment Number (Parcel No.), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map (if applicable), and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The assessor's maps and an explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's Office.

The properties subject to this notice are situated in Humboldt County, California, and are described as follows:

*Some item numbers are missing due to redemption of taxes or withdrawals.
